

Gustave Flaubert in Iran

Mohammad Reza Farsian¹

Associate Professor of French Language and Literature, Ferdowsi University of Mashhad, Mashhad, Iran

Mahshid Jafarzadeh Bakooei

M.A. in French Language and Literature, Ferdowsi University of Mashhad, Mashhad, Iran

Received 15 April 2015

Accepted 22 October 2015

Extended Abstract

1. Introduction

Gustave Flaubert, the leader of realism and the modern novel, is an influential French novelist. It should be noted that the careful attention in choosing the words distinguishes his style from other writers. His biggest concern in life is social problems. His masterpiece Madame Bovary is a novel which influences many famous romans. Although some of his works have been translated into Persian, these works have been translated again and again which means his works have the important place in Persian literature. This article will attempt to examine the position of the author, his work, and his influence on Persian writers and their styles.

2. Theoretical Framework

Gustave Flaubert is are a list, social and political writer. Flaubert loved literature when he was a young boy. He started writing and created some books that became masterpieces. These were often fanciful stories with the theme of autobiography (autobiography) (i.e. Asmar[Smarh]). His interest in writing history was influenced by his teacher in high school. He went to Paris to study legal rights after completing high school at the age of 18. Death of his father, sister, and his passionate love of Mrs. Eliza Schlesinger (Elisa Schlésinger) influenced his esprit because he did not forget it. That is why his novels are the mirror of his life. Elisa Schlesinger inspired works such as Diary of a madman (Mémoires d'un Fou) (which depicts mystical love), November (Novembre) (which tells the love of land and physical love), and Sentimental Education (L'Éducation sentimentale). He always detested the bourgeois class. He attacked bourgeois type with the character of Homais (Homais) in Madame Bovary (Madame Bovary). The collection of his works can be divided into three categories: the first category is anti quityi son which Salammbô (Salammbô) and Hrvdya (Hérodias) reflect. The second category of works of art such as the legend of St. Julian (La légende de Saint Julien)

¹ Corresponding Author: farsian@um.ac.ir

Hospitalier) and third category is fictional works such as the Temptation of Saint Antoine (La Tentation de Saint Antoine). At first glance, a kind of contradiction is evident in Flaubert's work; however, there is one thing in common behind these different works, and that is the beauty of art.

Realistic styles, literary arrays, the structure of rich sentences and deep psychological analyzes illustrate the features of his writing. Deep Flaubert's thoughts influenced the worldview of the other great writers and writing styles. In writing Madame Bovary, Flaubert opens new windows to realism. Throughout this book, Madame Bovary, the blame against romanticism is evident. Despite the fact that Flaubert inherited his writing style, words, and songs from Romantics, finally he concluded that he should harness the power of his imagination. This article describes the researches on translations of his works too.

3. Methodology

In this article, first we intend to introduce Flaubert and realism school and we consider their impact on Persian literature. In doing so, the East impact on Flaubert and his writing techniques are examined. Then, the history of translation, its evolution, and the factors involved in translations are exhibited. This article attempts to survey all of the Flaubert's translations as far as possible.

4. Results& Discussion

There is no doubt that a lot of research on Gustave Flaubert and his work has been done. We sometimes encounter more than 10 different translations of his novels. Despite the fact that Flaubert is one of the world's great authors, his books were translated into Farsi very late; however, this issue can also be very beneficial. It is important that the translators have their own styles.

5. Conclusions& Suggestions

Gustave Flaubert is one of the greatest novelists. Flaubert's careful choice of words and figure of speech is unique and clearly shows the excessive obsession of Flaubert in the creation of a literary work. Translations of western writers altered the writing style and fiction in Iran so that the role of other writers outshines that of Flaubert. However, Flaubert's work could not be successful (in Iran). Like Balzac the folk did not pay attention to his masterpieces; however, Madame Bovary gained big success among Iranians, and his books were translated into Farsi one after another.

Key Words:Comparative Literature, Gustave Flaubert, roman, realism, translation.

References (in Persian)

1. AtashVahidi, N. (2003). Gustave Flaubert's three stories, stories or novels ?Language and literature, 14, 31-38

2. AtashVahidi, N. (2008).The influence of the East on Gustave Flaubert's works .Education of the Language and Literature,24, 20-31.
3. Alshokry, F. (2007).Realism in contemporary fiction. Tehran: Negah.
4. Balaie, K. (1998).The emergence of Persiannovel(M. Ghavimiand& N. Khatat Trans.).Tehran: Moien.
5. Brunel, P., & (2006).French literature of the 19th century(Vol. 4) (Ziaodin. Dehshiri, Trans.).Tehran: SAMT.
6. Jalalati, N.(2011).Letters from Egypt. Tehran:Ketabsara Tandis.
7. Eshlaq, M. (2002).History of literature of the 19th century in France. Tehran: Jangal.
8. Jamshidi, G. (2012).Small songs for the moon. Tehran: Ofogh.
9. Khatami, A &Taghavi, A. (2006).The structure of realism in "fiction .literature" The study of Persian language and literature,6, 99-111.
10. KhazaeiFar, A. (2001).Proceedings of the First Symposium on Literary Translation in Iran. Mashhad :Banafsheh.
11. ZatAlian, G.,& Kassiri, G. (2009).The Art of Gustave Flaubert through the correspondences.Ghalam, 9, 37-52.
12. Rahimi, M.(1996).Madame Bovary by Gustave Flaubert, criticized the book (Vol. 2). Retrieved from <http://anthropology.ir/node/17816>.
13. Rahdar, A. (2004).The influence of the East on contemporary Iranian history.Teaching, 6, 171-228.
14. Sajedi, T. (2003).Guy de Maupassant in Iran .Faculty of Foreign Languages, 15, 47-62.
15. National Library of Iran. (2015). Retrieved from http://opac.nlai.ir/opac-prod/search/briefListSearch.do?command=FULL_VIEW&id=1096862&pageStatus=0&sortKeyValue1=sortkey_title&sortKeyValue2=sortkey_author (In Persian).
16. Sepanlou, M. A. (2002).The leading writers of Iran. Tehran: Negah.
17. Salimi, M. (2014).Survey of the evolution of the female image from Madame Bovaryto Flaubert's Salammbôto.Publication of Ferdowsi University of Mashhad.
18. SeyedHosseini, R. (1978).Literary schools.Tehran: Zaman.
19. Shahparrad, K.,& Hosseinzadeh, A. (2005).Survey of the books translated. Tehran: SAMT.
20. Sadeghizadeh Yazdi, F. (2012).Translation critique of "Sentimental Education" by Mehdi Sahabi and the others. Publication of Ferdowsi University of Mashhad.
21. Azimi, N.,& Lahooti, P. (2013).Introduction of death concept in Madame Bovary.French Language and Literature Studies,2, 35-52.
22. Fotoohi, M.&Sadeghi, E. (2013).The formation of realism in Iranian fiction.Literary Essays,46(3), 1-26.

23. Flaubert, G. (2001). Sentimental education (M.Sahabi, Trans.). Tehran: Center.
24. Flaubert, G. (1995). Salammô (A. Samii Guilani, Trans.). Tehran: Kharazmi.
25. Flaubert, G. (2005). Madame Bovary (M.Ghazi & R.Aghili, Trans.). Tehran: Majid.
26. Ghadami, F. (2012). Forging Flaubert's letters, Arman Newspaper, 6 June.
27. Kamali, M. J. (2013). The history of literary translation from French to Farsi. Mashhad: Research and Technology, Islamic Azad University of Mashhad and SokhanGostar Publications.
28. Kamali Dehghan, S. (2008, November). A Look at Gustave Flaubert's Sentimental Education: Birth of the first modern novel. Etemad Newspaper, P. 11.
29. Kahnemuyipour, G., & Khatat, N. (1995). Literary criticism (in French). Tehran : SAMT.
30. Golestan, A. (1958). From Flaubert's letters. Sadaf 10, 796-802.
31. Golshiri, A. (2012). The best story in the world. Tehran: Asredastan.
32. Lukacs, G. (2009). Historical novel (O. Mehregan, Trans.). Tehran: Sales.
33. Mo'tamedi, G. (2010). Reflects concept of the Devil in the display and analysis of several examples of its literature. Tehran: Publication of Islamic Azad University of Tehran.
34. Moeen, M. (2008). Moeen Persian dictionary. Tehran: Farhangnama.
35. Mirabedini, H. (2007). One hundred years of fiction. Tehran: Cheshmeh.
36. Nazridoost, M., & Goudarzi, S. (2013). Viewing Angle and death story in Threestories of Flaubert. French Language and Literature Studies, 8, 111-122.
37. Naqhibian, A. (2009). Delay on Flaubert's unfinished masterpiece Bouvard and Pecuchet: As the sun warms the blind. Golestaneh, 97, 76-77.
38. Navabi, D. (2009). History of translation from French to Farsi in Iran. Kerman: Bahonar University of Kerman.
39. Noori, A. (2011). Writing Madame Bovary or stupidity, art, and life. Tehran: Niloofar.

References (in English)

1. Bouty, M. (2001). Dictionary of books and themes of French literature. Paris: Hachette.
2. Champfleury, J. (2012). Realism. Paris: Hachette.
3. Flaubert, G. (1984). Madame Bovary. Paris: Gallimard.
4. Flaubert, G. (1984). Three stories. Paris: Larousse.
5. Forestier, L. (1987). Romans. Paris: Gallimard.
6. Lagarde, A., & Michard, L. (1965). Lagarde and Michard: XIXe siècle. Paris: Bordas.