

Phenomenology of Ghena(emotions) in Nizami's and Amir Khosrow's
*Leili and Majnoon

Seyede Ziba Behrooz*

Abstract

Phenomenology movement, which is a methodological idealism is in quest of exploring an abstract category called transcendental consciousness. This movement has not taken any position as regards the wise from the beginning and goes beyond the level of the sensory experience. In phenomenological critique which has a considerable potential for contemplating the literary works, the context is reduced to an embodiment of pure consciousness of the reader and with its all stylistic and semantic aspects becomes a unit organism in which the mind of the writer functions as its unifying essence.

After the Copernican revolution in The New Science, has emerged a generation of philosophers, Kant at the head of them all, based their philosophical ideas on Epistemology rather than Ontology, and led the philosophy toward Analysis than Systematization. Their main tactic was changing the positions of "subject" and "object" or more clearly, "recognizer agent" and "whatever rests on recognition" in the formation of knowledge. Descartes also has gotten help from subject to prove anything. In his view, Truth is whatever that people actually recognize. Husserl, affected by this change, also has known the new era as the age of empirical subjectivism. Subject is the same as "ego" and inner states of a true and primary existence located in center. It is the identifying agent and consciousness is inherent feature of subjectivity without which there would not be any way the subject. Accordingly, addressing the Ghanaian merely considers the states of human faced with it.

Analysis of Love states of Leili and Mjnoon in Nizami's poem

Phenomenological analysis of two love poems, Nizami and Amir Khosrow's Leili and Mjnoon, it was found that Leili herself refers to her aware conscience and does not want to say something or do an action unconsidered, unreflective, based on the subconscious. She takes steps very carefully and thoughtfully in any direction.

In all her states and reactions against a closed society and reproaching Arabs surrounded, she doesn't remove two ideas from her thought: One was caring her dignity, respect and body, another was being in love with Majnoon faithfully.

Majnoon is in love with Leili in a manner as if he has gone beyond himself and the limited world around and he has joined in with the unique existence. Moreover, Majnoon's imagination is a superior consciousness in the field of literature that shows the fact as it wants. Majnoon has torn silly mask of compromising; because he has gained insight into animal-like essence of people of his environment.

*Ph. D. student of Persian language and literature, University of Isfahan.

He will respond the brutality with companionship with wild animals and in that uncoordinated state, made himself coordinated and emancipated.

Leili and Majnoon both have accomplished egology and have been able to realize and crystallize the fact within their partial entity that is "existential". Understanding and recognizing the true self and becoming conscious of it, they could know and find Ghanaian love within themselves and give it their own meaning.

Leili in the Light of consciousness and according to intentionality and knowing love and communicating with other minds around, remains silent and apparently surrendered. She holds her breath and stays home within the fence. Majnoon also by the exigency of his conscious recognition and his active subjectivity refuses like savage and jumps out and goes till eternity.

Analysis of Love states of Leili and Mjnoon in Amir Khosrow's poem

But love between Leili and Majnoon in Amir Khosrow Dehlavi's poem is realistic and away from the knowledge and special attention.

They both do love but do not think about it. Amir Khosrow's Majnoon is just dancer and singer who is undergoing its attractions. Such ecstasy though internalized, is away from the subjective intention, does not comply with subjectivity, and bring man out of his own self and he no more can function as a subject. Leili also is a restless and worried lover. She only causes shame and blame of her mother and father.

Their Intuition of Love is a purely sensory and experiential intuition, that is the love without the knowledge of, awareness and recognition through conscious ego.

References

- 1- Bertens, Johannes (1382). The principals of theories of literature, Mohammad Reza Ab ol-Ghasemi (Trans.), 1st ed., Tehran: Mahi.
- 2- Casey, E.S. (1979). Imagining: A phenomenological study, Bloomington.
- 3- Dehlavi, Amir Khosrow (1343). Majnoon and Leili, science, and critical texts and the introduction of Muharram Ahmad Oghli Tahir Aliyev, the series of literary works from the Middle East nations. Moscow, Academy of Sciences of the Azerbaijan Soviet Socialist Republic, Oriental Institute: Office of Publications.
- 4- Dictionary of History of Ideas: Studies on the selection of povital ideas (1385). Editor: Philip P. Wiener, 3 f, g 1. A Group of translators(Trans.), Tehran: So'ad.
- 5- Dufferine, M. (1973). The Phenomenology of Aesthetic Experience, Evanston.
- 6- Eagleton, Terry (1390). Prologue on literary theory, 2nd ed., Abbas Mokhber (Trans.), 6st ed., Tehran: Nashr Markaz.
- 7- Embree, I. (Ed.) (1997). Encyclopedia of Phenomenology, from http:// www.springer.com / 978-0-7923-2956-5.
- 8- Fraleigh, Sondra Horton (1987). Dance and the Lived Body: A Descriptive Aesthetics, University of Pittsburgh.
- 9- Frantz Brentano (1973). Psychology from an Empirical Standpoint. O. Kraus. Trans. Rancurello, B.B. Terrell, and Linda McAlister (eds.), London: Rutledge & Kegan Paul, p.988.

- 10- Gholamrezayee, Mohammad (1370). Versified Ghenaian (love/sentimental) Stories: From the beginning of Darian persian poetry to the early in seventh century, 1st ed., Tehran: FardaBeh.
- 11- Gilson, Etienne (1377). Criticism of the philosophical thought of the West, Ahmad Ahmadi (Trans.), Tehran: Hekmat.
- 12- Haghshenas, Ali Mohammad (1382). Persian Language and Literature at the crossing between tradition and modernity (collection of articles), 1st ed., Tehran: Agah.
- 13- Heidegger (1991). Nietzsche, D.F. Krell (Trans.), 4 vol., Sanfrancisco.
- 14- Husserl, Edmund (1352). Reflections of Cartesian Introduction to Phenomenology, Abd or-Rashidian (1386) (Trans.), 3th ed., Tehran: Ney.
- 15- Jakobson, Roman (1381). Metaphorical and virtual poles in Aphasia, in Linguistics and Literary Criticism, Mary Khouzani (Trans.), 2nd ed., Tehran: Ney publication.
- 16- Khatami, Mahmud (1387). Discussions on phenomenology of Art, 1st Edition. Tehran: Academy of Art.
- 17- Kockelmans, J. J. (1985). Heidegger, Art and Artwork, Nijhof.
- 18- Naraghi, Arash (1391). About love; Articles by Martha Nussbaum, Robert Solomon, Robert Nozick, Thomas Lawrence, Annet Bayer, Elizabeth Rappaport, 3th ed., Tehran: Ney publication.
- 19- Nizami Ganjavi, Hakim (1962). Leili and Mjnoon, Hassan Vahid Dastgerdi (emend.), Tehran: Elmi.
- 20- Nizami Ganjavi, Hakim (1380). Leili and Mjnoon, Hassan Vahid Dastgerdi (emend.), Saeed Hamidian (effo.) G, 4, Tehran: Qatre.
- 21- Novy Hauser, Frederick (1391). Fichte theory of subjectivity in philosophy, Seyed M. Hosseini (Trans.), 1st ed., 1, Tehran: Qoqnoos.
- 22- Sakalvsky, Robert (1388). Introduction to Phenomenology, Reza Ghorbani (Trans.), vol. 2, Tehran: Gam Nao.
- 23- Sirjani, Saeed (1385). Two women faces: Shirin and Leili in Khamse of Nizami, 10th ed., Tehran: Peykan.
- 24- Spiegelburg, Herbert (1391). The phenomenological movement, Historical Introduction, Masoud Olia (Trans.), vol. 1 & 2, 1st ed., Tehran: Minuye Kherad.
- 25- Suzanne Vézina, Danielle (2006). Phenomenology of Dance, Canada: Simon Fraser University.